COLE, George Watson:

Bibliographer. Was born at Warren, Conn., Sept. 6, 1850. His early education was received in the public schools of his native county and at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. After teaching school for four years, during which he read law, he was admitted to the bar in 1876 and practiced law in his native county until 1885, when he abandoned law to engage in library work, in which he met with marked success. During 1885 and 1886 he compiled the printed Classified Catalogue of the Fitchburg (Mass.) Public Library, a work still regarded as a model for a classified catalogue of a public library. (The library was classified according to Dewey's Decimal Classification.) From Fitchburg he went to New York in the autumn of 1886 to become the librarian of the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, then being started by Mr. Charles Pratt. He also at the same time attended the Library School at Columbia University, in New York, from which he was graduated in 1888. For the next three years he was connected with the Newberry Library, at Chicago, Ill., which he left in January, 1891, to become librarian of the Free Public Library of Jersey City, N.J., then being organized. His connection with that library ceased in December, 1895. During his librarianship 50,000 volumes were purchased and catalogued (the catalogues being printed, and more than one million (1,000,000) volumes were circulated for home reading, somewhat over one-half of these being distributed through delivery stations, then a comparatively new feature of library work. The attention of the most prominent librarians in the country was attracted by the success of this undertaking, and in 1893 Mr. Cole was selected to prepare a paper on "Branch Libraries and Delivery Stations," which he read at the World's Library Congress, held at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago. In December, 1895, owing to ill-health, Mr. Cole resigned his position as librarian and devoted the next two years to travel, spending the winter of 1895-1896 in Bermuda and the greater part of 1897 in Europe, principally at Paris. He attended the International Conference of Librarians at London in 1897; his name by mistake appearing in the printed list of (641) members of the Conference as "Watson, Col. G., Jersey City, N.Y., U.S.A." On his return to this country he became interested in bibliography, and has since devoted himself exclusively to that pursuit. In December, 1901, he began the compilation of the very rare collection of American and English Literature and Miscellany, in the library of the late E. Dwight Church, of Brooklyn, N.Y. The results of his labors is contained in seven volumes, imperial octavos, containing in all 3,789 pages, with 1,755 facsimiles of title pages, colophons and other interesting features of the rarest volumes in this extraordinary collection. The portion devoted to the Americana, in five volumes (2,635 pages, 1,387 facsimiles), was published in 1907. This work, which has been highly praised by competent critics in The Nation (N.Y.) and American Historical Review, is characterized by the latter of these as "a work of reference of extraordinarily high value for historical workers" and as "the best made catalogue of American, of any such magnitude, that has ever been executed." The portion devoted to English literature and (a few) Miscellanea, in 8 volumes (1,154 pages, 368 facsimiles), was published in 1909. Its chief value consists in its detailed descriptions of the numerous early editions of Shakespeare's works, both folio and quarto. The Church collection of Shakespeare ranks first in importance in this country, and is surpassed by only four other collections, those in the Bodleian, British Museum and Trinity College (Cambridge) libraries, and that of the Duke of Devonshire. There is a copy of the Church catalogue in the British Museum. Besides these works Mr. Cole is the author of "American Libraries, Their Past, Present and Future" (1895), printed in the "Occasional Papers" of the Pennsylvania Library Club; "Bermuda and the Challenger Expedition" (1901); "Compiling a Bibliography" (1902); "Libraries in the City of New York" (1902), in the New York Library Club's Handbook; and "Bermuda in Periodical Literature" (1907). He has also written numerous articles upon library and bibliographical matters for the Library Journal and other periodicals devoted to those subjects. His ingenious size card for determining the sizes of books, based upon the size notation of the American Library Association, is in quite general use in American libraries. Mr. Cole is a life member of the American Historical Association, of the American Library Association, of which he was Treasurer from 1893-1896, and of the Bibliographical Society of America. He is also a member of the Bibliographical Society, London; of the Institut Internationale de Bibliographie (Brussels); of the American Geographical Society, of the New York Library Club (President, 1893-94), of the New Jersey Library Association (President, 1894-95), and of several other local library associations and clubs. His address is Riverside, Conn., U.S.A.

COX, Palmer:

The Brownie man. Was born in Granby, Quebec, Canada, on April 28, 1840. The town is near the United States border, and from it may be seen the Green Mountains and the Adirondacks. His father was a pensioner of the British Army, having seen service, when a youth, in the War of 1812. Early in life Palmer left home, and after a short stay in the Eastern States went to Lucknow, Ont. After two years he drifted to San Francisco, by the Isthmus of Panama, and followed railroading; but in the meantime contributed articles to the local papers, and after a few years his first book appeared. On being encouraged to return to New York and take up the pen and pencil for a livelihood, he reached that city in 1875. His articles for children attracted the most attention, and he took up that sort of literature as his life work, and it was not long until the Brownies made their appearance. The following books have been published: "Squibs of California," later enlarged and rewritten as "Comic Yarns"; "Hans Von Pelter's Trip to Gotham"; "How Columbus Found America"; "That Stanley"; "Queer People"; "The Brownies, Their Book", "Another Brownie Book"; "The Brownies at Home"; "The Brownies Around the World"; "The Brownies Through the Union"; "The Brownies Abroad"; "The Brownies in the Philippines"; "The Brownie Primer"; "Brownie Clown in Brownie Town"; "The Brownie Year Book"; "Calendar"; "Portrait Gallery," etc. Mr. Cox has also produced two Brownie plays, one a spectacular extravaganza, and the other a cantata for children. He has traveled extensively in America, and through Europe, visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland and France. Address: 134 West 23d St., N.Y. City, U.S.A.

CROKER, Richard:

Politician. For many years the leader, or as some put it, "Boss" of a political organization in New York City, called Tammany Hall. Mr. Croker was born in Ireland about seventy years ago. His political activity has, however, been confined to the United States of America. He has been an alderman, coroner, fire commissioner, and city chamberlain of New York City. In early life a Protestant, he is a convert to Roman Catholicism. In 1901, he left America and settled first in England and then in Ireland to live the life of a retired country squire. He is married. Principal hobby and recreation now, horse-racing. In 1907 his horse Orby, won the English Derby race. In the same year, Orby also won the Irish Derby. Mr. Croker and his political career have caused much strife and criticism in times gone by, but it is generally admitted that the ex-leader of Tammany is a man of strong personality; one who makes and keeps friends. CROSSLEY, Mme. Ada:

Born at Gippsland, Victoria, Australia. Madame Ada Crossley has been delighting Londoners with her magnificent voice, after a very successful tour in Australia. She first appeared in England in 1895, since when she has attained a foremost reputation. Previous to her first English appearance, she had sung successfully with the Melbourne Philharmonic Society, and she has studied under such well-known people as Sir Charles Santley and Madame M. Marchesi. Madame Crossley is a thorough liver of the out-of-door life, and as an equestrian she has few equals, even among the opposite sex. Some idea of Madame Crossley's popularity in her own country may be gained from the fact that at Yarran recently she was met by a troop of children, who strewed flowers in her path as she walked and sang "Home, Sweet Home" the while. Everywhere she went she was accorded almost royal receptions, and she was entertained by numerous Mayors and other public people. In the course of her tour, the famous contralto traveled 70,000 miles, and sang at considerably over a hundred concerts. Address: 'Durham House," Langford Pl., London, N.W., England.

During 1897-99, engaged in domestic mission work in Canada. During 1897-1905, studied philosophy with Prof. Watson, of Queen's University. In 1905, Queen's conferred upon him the degree of D.D. Since 1900 has occupied pastorates in Kingston, Toronto and Winnipeg. Is at present pastor of Grace Church, Winnipeg. Takes active interest in educational movements. Is trustee of Queen's University. Was Old Testament lecturer in Queen's and in University Extension Institutes. As a lecturer and preacher is generally regarded as having made a valuable contribution to present day Theological reconstruction. In a leading Boston publication he is referred to as "the outstanding though unofficial leader of Liberalism in Methodist circles in Canada. His interpretation of the duties of the minister is exceedingly comprehensive. He is generally regarded as the foremost preacher of Canadian Methodism, while many component critics give him first place among all the preachers of Canada. He possesses very full and accurate knowledge of the Bible along modern lines of study, and combines with his deep philosophical insight the power of interpreting life. His sermons, though profound, are of a most interesting and attractive character. He has a most affectionate nature, which makes him a delightful companion and greatly helps him in his work as a pastor. He also takes a deep and active interest in the movements of social reform outside the immediate work of his own church." Address: Grace Church Parsonage, Winnipeg, Canada.

CULLOM, Shelby Moore:
Statesman and jurist. Senator of the U.S.A., representing the State of Illinois. Born in Kentucky, U.S.A., Nov. 22, 1829; son of Richard Northcraft and Elizabeth (Coffey) Cullom. Received an academic education. Senator Cullom comes of that hardy race of adventurous pioneers who, having made Kentucky famous, pushed across the border into the fertile regions of Central Illinois,—the type in Illinois of honesty, endurance, courage and ability. He made his entry into political life by being elected a member of the Illinois General Assembly. Senator Cullom has been a Republican almost from the very beginning of that party. In 1861 he was elected Speaker of the Republican Legislature of Illinois, the youngest member upon whom the honor has been conferred. In 1864 he was elected to Congress and was twice re-elected, serving for six years. In 1876 he was elected Governor of the State of Illinois. In 1883 he was elected to the United States Senate. As a State legislator, as Speaker, as Congressman and as Governor, Senator Cullom won high distinction before the people of Illinois. He became Federal Senator, representing this great State in the Senate for a longer term than any of his predecessors from Illinois, and as such he will be reported in American history. For the past few years Senator Cullom has had in mind the accomplishment of an undertaking which will stir the blood of every citizen of Illinois, the erecting of a monument in the City of Washington, which will commemorate the fame of America's greatest President and Statesman, Abraham Lincoln. Married, 1st, Hanna M. Fisher, Dec. 12, 1855 (Died March, 1861); 2d, Julia Fisher, May 5, 1863 (Died Aug. 18, 1909). Address: Springfield, Ill., U.S.A.

DICKSON, George, M.A.:

Was educated in the Public and High Schools of Ontario. He graduated B.A. in the Provincial University, and M.A., in 1878. He was Assistant Master of the Chatham Grammar School, and attracted the attention of Rev. R. A. Fife, D.D., Principal of Woodstock College, by whom he was offered a position in Woodstock, which he held for two years. Then he became First Assistant Master of the Hamilton Collegiate Institute, and six months afterwards was promoted to the Principalship, which position he held for thirteen years, increasing the annual attendance of the school from 230 to 560. The school, under Mr. Dickson's regime, was noted for the number of carefully prepared pupils sent to the various Universities, some of whom now hold important University positions in Canada and the United States. When the Principalship of Upper Canada College became vacant, in 1885, the Government of Ontario selected Mr. Dickson for the position. When he assumed the Principalship of the College he found the attendance only 250, and in three years the school reached its full capacity, there being no fewer than 415 on enrollment, and a "waiting list" of several hundred pupils. So crowded did the school become that the Government decided to purchase a larger site and erect larger buildings. The college was signally successful in winning scholarships and honors at the Universities. In 1897 he founded St. Margaret's College, a private Collegiate School for girls. Its aim was "to provide a school of the same academic standing as that of the best Collegiate Institutes of the Province." This policy has placed the private schools of Toronto on a par with the best High Schools and Collegiate Institutes of the public system. In addition to his work as President of St. Margaret's College, he established a large private Correspondence School that drew its pupils from all parts of Canada. He is one of the founders of St. Andrew's College for Boys, and has been a member of the Board since its inception. He organized the Hamilton Teachers' Association, and was its first President. In 1886 he was Chairman of the High School Masters' Section for Ontario. For ten years he was Corresponding Secretary of the Hamilton Scientific Association; for four years a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto; for fourteen years a member of the Senate of Knox College, Toronto. He is still actively engaged in educational work. Address: St. Margaret's College, Toronto, Canada.

DIGBY, Lord: Edward Henry Trafalgar:

Born Oct. 21, 1846. He is the tenth to hold the title, and the owner of 33,000 acres in the West Country and in Ireland. The family claims descent from Aelmar, who, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, held land at Tilton, in Leicestershire. In 1461, an Everard Digby was killed at the battle of Towton, while fighting under the banner of Henry VI. Then later on, a certain Sir Simon Digby, of Coleshill, Warwickshire, where, by the way, a branch of the family still lives, fought on the side of Richmond at Bosworth field, and on Richmond's accession to the throne as Henry VIII, Sir Simon was rewarded by large grants of land and lucrative public appointments. The present Lord Digby, who has also been a soldier, has a charming place known as Minterne House, near Cerne Abbas. It is situated in the heart of the Thomas Hardy country, and the town in his novels is disguised as Abbot's Cernel. The Castle of Sherborne, which came into the possession of the Digbys in 1817, after it had been occupied by the infamous Carr, Earl of Somerset, and Sir Walter Raleigh, was at one time the family seat. It is now the home of Mr. Wingfield Digby. A member of the family was the brave Admiral Sir Henry Digby, great grandson of the 5th Lord Digby, who married, in 1806, the widowed Viscountess Andover, born Jane Coke, and, like her, seems to have been gifted supernaturally. As he was cruising off the Spanish coast in the Alceme, in Oct., 1799, at 11 o'clock at night he summoned the officer of the watch and asked whether, to his knowledge, any one had entered the cabin. On receiving an emphatic "No," Digby replied: "Very odd; I was perfectly convinced I had been spoken to. Every time I drop asleep I hear some one shouting in my ear, 'Digby, Digby, go to the northward!' I shall certainly do so. Tack every hour till daybreak, and then call me." The officer thought the captain was mad, but obeyed orders. Soon after seven in the morning a large ship was reported at the weather bow. She proved to be a Spanish vessel laden with cochineal, spices and an enormous sum in silver dollars. England was at war with Spain at the time, and she fell a prize to the Alceme. Address: 16 Grosvenor Place, London, S.W., England.

DUNCAN, Sir John, Kt. (cr. 1909), J.P., F.J.I.:
Newspaper proprietor. Born March 7, 1846, at Edinburgh, Scotland; eldest son of the late David Duncan, J.P., a distinguished Alderman of the City of Cardiff, Wales. Sir John is one of the rapidly diminishing inhabitants of Cardiff who have seen that important town rise from a population of 20,000 to one of 250,000, and he has, in many ways, assisted the progress of that great commercial centre and capital of the Principality of Wales. His chief public work has been connected with education. Sir John was one of the chief promoters of the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, which was established in Cardiff in 1885, and to which the government, in 1910, raised their annual subsidy from £4,500 to £9,500. For his services in this important institution he was presented by the Corporation of Cardiff, in 1885, with an illuminated address. For many years he was vice-chairman and afterward chairman of the Cardiff Scheme under the Welsh Intermediate Act, and when the schools were handed over to the Cardiff Corporation by the Act of 1902, he was voted an illuminated address by the Lord Mayor and Governors, warmly acknowledging his services. Sir John was one of the original members of the Court of the Welsh University, and for several years was also a member of the Central Board of Welsh Intermediate Education. He is also a Governor of Howell's Charity (Llandaff), and of other educational institutions. In connection with journalism, Sir John is one of the most highly esteemed members in the profession. For ten years he was governor and chairman of the Press Association. and in 1891 organized, with Baron de Reuter, the splendid telegraphic service known as Reuter's Special Service of Foreign and Colonial Telegrams. This service has more than quadrupled the foreign telegrams received by the British Press, and has increased the British news sent to the Colonial and American press by a similar amount. He is also a trustee of the Newspaper Society, which comprises the proprietors of all the London and Provincial press; and is one of the original Fellows of the Institute of Journalists. Sir John was appointed a magistrate for the County of Glamorgan, in 1891; an Assessor, under the Church Discipline Act; Income Tax Assessor, Land Commissioner, etc. He is co-proprietor of the South Wales Daily News, South Wales Echo, and Cardiff Times, all of which journals have an enormous influence throughout Wales and the West of England. He married, Sept. 5, 1877, Mary, the eldest daughter of the late Joseph Stowe (ship owner), of Liverpool, and has three sons and four daughters. Sir John is an extensive traveler in the Mediterranean countries, Egypt, Palestine, South Africa, the United States, Canada, Syria, Russia, Sweden, Norway, Iceland, Morocco and other countries. His home address is Dros-y-Mor, Penarth, near Cardiff. His offices at 102-105 St. Mary St., Cardiff, Wales.

DUNDAS, The Hon. Kenneth:

District Commissioner of the East African Protectorate. His father, the sixth Viscount Melville, who succeeded to the title in 1904, spent nearly forty years in the Consular Service, from which he retired only three years ago; and his eldest brother serves as British Vice-Consul for German East Africa at Dae-es-Salaam. Lord Melville is the owner of two country seats—Cotterstock Hall, near Oundle, and Melville Castle, Lasswade, near Edinburgh. The castle is a noble building near the river, and surrounded by a splendid stretch of woodland. Occupying the site of Rizzio's traditional home, where Queen Mary sometimes stayed, the Castle also entertained Royalty on the occasion of a visit, in 1882, from George IV. The beautiful valley in which it is situated has had great attractions for many men of letters, including Ben Jonson, Sir Walter Scott and De Quincey. Address: London, England.

DUNDONALD, Earl of:

Born on Oct. 29, 1852. Educated at Eton. Joined the 2d Life Guards in 1870. Peer and soldier, Lord Dundonald has seen active service in Egypt, when he was on the desert march to the relief of Khartoum, and later on in South Africa, where he was in the thick of the fighting and helped to relieve Ladysmith. For two years he was in command of the Canadian Militia. Lord Dundonald comes of a fighting family, the Cochranes, who for many generations have been devoted to science and naval and military exploits. In Lady Munster's "My Memories," there is an interesting account of the valiant tenth Earl of Dundonald and his beautiful wife, Miss Katherine Barnes, with whom he ran away from a boarding-school. Lady Munster writes: "In 1818, Lord Cochrane (as he then was) and his beautiful wife went to Chili, and he aided in establishing the Republic there and the Empire of Brazil. His wife was with him, showing as much courage and audacity as her husband. She was made Mistress of the Robes of the Empress of Brazil, and she used to tell a story of her once being employed by the Emperor to ride across the mountains alone, entrusted with the most valuable documents—I don't know exactly where or what for, but brigands got hold of her, and tearing her off her horse, searched her thoroughly as they thought, and when she tried to escape, wounded her severely with a stiletto (she often showed me the mark). In spite of it all, she saved the papers, shot an assailant, and galloped off, safe and nearly sound." In 1900, Lord Dondonald was promoted to Major-General, for distinguished service, Lieut.-Gen., 1907, and Hon. Col. 91st Canadian Highlanders. Address: 34 Portman Sq., W., London, England, and Gwyrch Castle, Abergele, N. Wales.

on the Italian, chiefly Roman stage, as leading lady in the plays of Dumas and Sardou, but afterwards played parts of greater depth. She earned golden opinions by her combined force and gracefulness, in 1892 appearing at Vienna and Berlin, in 1893 at New York, and her recent visits to England have, by an unanimous accord, reaffirmed her triumphs. Although she appears chiefly in grave parts (Magda, Nora, Adrienne Lecouvreur), her versatility has also allowed her to please in the lighter vein of Dumas' Francillon, and as the hostess in Goldoni's "Locandiera." More recently she has produced d'Annunzio's "Gioconda," and "Francesca da Rimini."

ELLESMERE, Earl of: Francis Charles Granville Egerton:
Born April 5, 1847, London. Educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge. He owns about 13,000 acres of land. The Earl of Ellesmere is a very regular attendant at most of the meetings at this home of horse-racing. This hobby is, by the way, his only expensive pastime, and in spite of the fact that he has owned and run many good horses he has never been known to make a bet. Lord Ellesmere is one of those old-fashioned peers who maintain that property has its duties as well as its rights, and on this account he spends the greater portion of the year at Worsley Hall, his place near Manchester. Lord Ellesmere is descended from Sir Thomas Egerton, first Viscount Brackley, who, in the days of Queen Elizabeth, rose at the bar and held, successively, the important offices of Attorney and Solicitor-General, Master of the Rolls, and Lord Keeper of the Great Seal. The third Duke of Bridgewater, another of Lord Ellesmere's ancestors, was the founder of inland navigation in this country, the Bridgewater Trust having realized a splendid revenue for his successors. Lady Mabel Egerton, Lord Ellesmere's eldest daughter, is honorary secretary and treasurer of the Lend-a-Hand Club, of which her youngest sister, Lady Beatrice Kemp, is president. From the annual report just published, it is clear that they as well as Lady Rachel Byng, who accepted the control of the flower and needlework branch, are no mere figureheads. All three of Lord Ellesmere's daughters are actively engaged in philanthropic work, Lady Leila Egerton only resigning her honorary secretaryship in the Lend-a-Hand Club to her sister to take up work at Clewer. Publications: "Sir Hector's Watch"; "A Broken Stirrup Leather"; "A Sapphire Ring," etc. Address: Worsley Hall, Manchester, Bridgewater House, London, S.W., England.

Commissioner of the Treasury. He was accused of taking part in the Fanatic Plot, and being committed to the Tower, was found there in 1683 with his throat cut. Cassiobury Park is one of Wyatt's Gothic mansions of a century ago. It contains a valuable library and some splendid carvings by Grinling Ribbons. The park is beautifully wooded, and one of the finest in the Home Counties. Sir Arthur Capell, who was Sheriff of Hertfordshire in 1592, became guardian to his grandson (subsequently Lord Capell) on his being left an orphan. There is extant a quaint document written by the old gentleman (who must have been a very rabid Protestant) styled: "Reasons agaynst the travellinge of my grandchylde, Arthur Capell, into the parts beyond the sea." "In primis, His callinge is to be conteret gentillman, wherein there is lyttell or no use of foreane experience. Item. It is to be feared that thoroughe the wycked prests and Jesuites in those forane parts he may be perverted to the idolatrous Romane relygion, and if it be awnswered that he is so well-grounded in trewe relygoun allready that there is no feare thereof, it maye be replyed agayne that he is very younge and they subtyle and industrious." Electrical Engineer. Born Dorchester, Mass., Aug. 19, 1867; son of Denis and Louisa (Doherty) Ferguson. Educ. Mass. Inst. of Theol. (S.B.), Boston, Mass. Was the first Central Station Engineer in this country to recommend the system of generating three-phase alternating current with high-tension transmission lines to substations, containing rotaries for converting from alternating current to direct current for general distribution, and it is largely by reason of the general adoption of this system that the great electric power developments in the large cities of this country have been made possible. It was on the strength of his careful investigation of European practice and conditions as set forth in his subsequent reports and recommendations that the differential rates now so largely employed, came into general use in the United States, and it is not too much to say that Mr. Ferguson was one of the earliest exponents and advocates in this country of what is now universally admitted to be the most equitable method of charging for electric light and power service. Author of the following technical papers: "Relation Between Candle Power, Voltage, Current and Energy Consumed in Incandescent Lamps"; "Commercial Value of Acetylene Gas as an Illuminant"; "Distribution from Central Stations by Direct Current"; "Rates," (Proceedings National Electrical Light Ass'n, 1902); "Economy and Distribution of Electrical Energy"; "Methods for Charging for Electrical Energy by the Chicago Edison Company"; "Storage Batteries for Small Stations"; "Distribution of Energy in Large Cities"; "Underground Electrical Construction" (International Electrical Congress, 1904). GEORGE, William Reuben:

Born West Dryden, N.Y., June 4, 1866. Common school education. Removed from country home to N.Y. City, 1880, and engaged in business; as a pastime, engaged in social service among boys and girls of the poorer sections of N.Y. City; took a fresh-air camp of these children to Freeville, N.Y., in 1890; feeling that gifts extended to them were tending to their pauperization, hit on plan of requiring equivalent in labor for these articles; this experiment by degrees evolved into a system of self-government, with personal property entering in as a strong factor. The idea of resolving this community into a village just the same as any village of adults was carried out in 1895; this village was called The Junior Republic. The summer work was discontinued and it became an all-the-year-round affair; as years progressed it not only took poor children, but others as well; by this date it has evolved into a village where people of all classes and conditions of society are located, and it is carried on by these young people between sixteen and twenty-one just as ably as if it were composed of adults. A National Organization, with Mr. George in charge, is extending the work to other states. Visitors come from all over the world to see this unique commonwealth. Author: "The Junior Republic, its History and Ideals," by D. Appleton & Co. Married, Nov. 14, 1896, Esther Ide Brewster, New York. Address: Freeville, N.Y., U.S.A.

GERMANY, Emperor of: Wilhelm II., King of Prussia:
Born Jan. 27, 1859, at Berlin. He is of the House of Hohenzollern, and the older son of Frederick III and Princess Royal Victoria of England. Was educated at home, and entered the army Jan. 27, 1869; attended the Kassel Gymnasium, 1874-77; then studied at Bonn Univ., 1877-79; appointed commander of a regiment (Hussars of the Guards), 1885; became Crown Prince, March 13, 1888; and Emperor and King, June 15, 1888. Married Princess Auguste Victoria (born Oct. 22, 1858), Feb. 27, 1881. The Emperor is a man of varied interests and many accomplishments; more of an ideal ruler than his father and grandfather. He caused Prince Bismarck to resign, March 20, 1890, appointing as Chancellors, successively, General Caprivi (1890-94), Prince Hohenlohe (1894-97), Count, later Prince Buelow (1897-1909), and v. Bethmann-Hollweg (since 1909). Germany has now had over forty years of peace, not counting colonial war operations, and the fear that William II might engage in war recklessly has proved ungrounded. The army as well as the navy, however, is always fit for war upon a moment's notice. The fortieth anniversary of his entrance to the army was celebrated throughout all Prussia, Jan. 27, 1909; the next great anniversary of his life and reign will be the 15th of June, 1913, when he will have been Emperor and King a quarter of a century. William II has no civil list as Emperor, but only as King of Prussia; to that, however, considerable is added through the royal domains and factories, and some mines; but he is not rich. Seems to be a firm believer in the divine right of kings, yet has shown himself, in many ways, more progressive and up-to-date than most of the old Prussian conservatives and agrarians. The children of the Emperor are: Crown Prince Wilhelm (born 1882; married, 1905, Duchess Cecilie Auguste Marie, daughter of Grand Duke Friedrich Franz III of Mecklenburg-Schwerin; children: Prince Wilhelm Friedrich and Prince Louis Ferdinand); Prince Eitel-Friedrich (born 1883; married, 1906, Duchess Sophie Charlotte of Oldenburg); Prince Adalbert (born 1884); Prince August Wilhelm (born 1887); Prince Oskar (born 1888); Prince Joachim (born 1890); Princess Viktoria Luise (born 1892). Brothers and sisters of the Emperor are: Princess Charlotte (wife of Prince Bernhard of Saxe-Meiningen); Prince Heinrich (born 1862; married, 1888, Princess Irene of Hesse, daughter of Grand Duke Ludwig; children: Prince Waldemar; Prince Sigismund; Prince Heinrich, (died 1904); Princess Margaret E. (wife of Prince Friedrich Carl of Hesse); Princess Sophie (wife of Crown Prince Konstantin of Greece); Princess Viktoria (wife of Prince Adolf of Schaumburg-Lippe). Family connections are: Prince Friedrich Heinrich (born 1874, at Hanover; grandson of Prince Albrecht, brother of Emperor Wilhelm I; son of Prince Fr. Albrecht of Prussia—died 1906—and Princess Marie of Saxe-Altenburg, died 1898); Prince Friedrich Leopold (born 1865, at Berlin; son of Prince Friedrich Carl of Prussia —died 1885—nephew of Emperor Wilhelm I), and Princess Maria of Anhalt (died 1906); married Princess Luise of Schleswig-Holstein, sister of the present Empress; children: Princess Viktoria, Prince Friedrich Sigismund); Princess Luise Margarete (sister of Prince Friedrich Leopold; niece of Emperor Friedrich III; wife of Prince Arthur of Connaught); Prince Friedrich Wilhelm (born 1880, at Camens; brother of Prince Friedrich Heinrich; married, 1910, Princess Agathe, daughter of Duke Viktor of Ratibor); Prince Joachim Albrecht (born 1876, at Hanover; brother of Prince Friedrich Heinrich and Prince Friedrich Wilhelm).

GIFFORD, Earl of: William George Montagu Hay:

Born Nov. 4, 1884. Graduate of Eton College and Oxford University. The Earl of Gifford, eldest son, and heir to the Marquess of Tweeddale, who is off to East Africa after big game, is not making his first visit to the Dark Continent, as he was shooting there last year. Lord Gifford is an excellent sportsman, and has made many good bags on his father's moors, and also indulged in the excitements of chamois shooting in the Tyrol. A soldier by profession, he commenced his military career in the Lothian Yeomanry, and thence passed into the 1st Life Guards. In 1903, while exercising his Yeomanry on Belhaven Sands, Lord Gifford had a bad accident, being thrown from his horse. The title of Earl of Gifford was immortalized by Sir Walter Scott, in "Marmion"; but the old castle which figures in that work is not Yester House, Lord Tweeddale's seat. Address: 6 Hill St., Berkely Sq., London, W., England.

Labor Leader. Born in London, England, Jan. 27, 1850; son of Samuel and Sarah (Root) Gomper. He is the father of the eight-hour law for government work, the ten-hour law for employees of street railroads, and of Labor Day as the workingman's legal holiday. He went to the United States when thirteen years old, settled in New York City, and the next year (1864) helped to organize the Cigar Makers' International Union, of which he was among the first registered members, and he served the union as secretary and president for six years. He also edited its local paper, The Picket, during that time. He was president of the New York State Federation of Labor, and he was the founder of the American Federation of Labor in 1881, serving as its president for five years without salary or other compensation. He was nominated by both the Democratic and Republican parties in his district for State Senator; the Republican party offered him the nomination as Representative in Congress; Governor Hill tendered him a place on the State Board of Arbitration, and President McKinley on the Industrial Commission, all of which honors he declined. He was closely associated with the effort to obtain a treaty between the United States and Great Britain for international arbitration of all disputes. He was Vice-President of the National Civic Federation formed to establish better relations between workmen and their employers. His membership in associations, clubs and fraternities includes the American Federation of Labor, Cigar Makers' International Union of America, Free and Accepted Masons, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Benevolent and Protective Elks and the Home Club. He was president of the American Federation of Labor from the year of its foundation, 1881, with the exception of two years, and he still held the office in 1905; first vice-president of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America for ten years. He served as noble grand master of his Odd Fellow Lodge, 1873, and as deputy grand master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of his district in 1876. He is the author of: "The Eight-Hour Workday"; "No Compulsory Arbitration"; "What Does Labor Want?" and "Organized Labor: Its Struggles, Its Enemies and Fool Friends." He edited The American Federationist from 1894, and contributed to newspapers and magazines. Married Sophia Julian. Home: 2122 1st St., N.W. Business: 801-809 G St., N.W., Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

GRAYSON, Victor:
Socialist member of the British House of Commons. Born in 1882. Mr. Grayson has been an engineering apprentice, a divinity student, a journalist and a member of Parliament, all within the twenty-eight years of his life. Since he was twenty-five years of age he has represented in the House of Commons a division of Yorkshire. Noted for his extreme radicalism and fervent democracy. To his mind the first Parliamentary question of importance is the finding of a remedy for the poverty of England. An earnest and eloquent advocate of the cause he represents. Address: Crescent Lodge, Stockwell Park Road, London, W., England.

GREAT BRITAIN, King of: George V.:
King of Great Britain and Ireland, Emperor of India, Defender of the Faith, etc. Born June 3, 1865. His father, Edward VII., was the first King of the House Coburg-Hanover; his mother, Queen Alexandra, is the daughter of the late Christian IX., King of Denmark. After receiving a thorough education, he entered the navy, rising gradually to the rank of Admiral. Received the title "Duke of York," but after his older brother's death he became Prince of Wales. July 6, 1894, he married the Princess Mary, only daughter of the Duke of Teck; they have six children, the oldest of whom is Edward, Prince of Wales, who is also in the navy. The other children are: Albert Frederick George, born Dec. 14, 1895; Victoria Alex. Alice May, born April 25, 1897; Henry William Albert, born May 31, 1900; George Edw. Alex. Edmund, born Dec. 20, 1902; John Charles Francis, born July 12, 1905. George V. became King in May, 1910, and was crowned with great ceremony in June, 1911, together with Queen Mary. He has many titles, offices, dignities, academic degrees and high orders, and is a Bencher of Lincoln's Inn of Court. He has made official and state tours to India and to Canada; takes great interest in scientific matters, but is not a patron of sports like his father. He is a man of culture and quiet tastes; at the same time a ready public speaker. The family life of their Majesties is said to be a model one, and as the King is now only 46 years of age, there is a probability of a long and happy reign.
